Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

4. Claims 1-14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. It simply displays a table, does not manipulate or change data, and the monitor argued is in the preamble and has been given no weight and therefore is not seen to be in the technological arts.

5. Claims 15-18, 22-27 are not seen to be in the technological arts, no technology is claimed but a display and that is in the preamble, and therefore is not seen to be in the technological arts.

6. Claims 19-21, 36-39 are not seen to be in the technological arts, but code per se, the instructions are simply on the medium and is not executed.

7. Claims 28-35 are not seen to be in the technological arts, no technology is claimed but a display, and therefore is not seen to be in the technological arts.

8. As an initial matter, the United States Constitution under Art. I, §8, cl. 8 gave Congress the power to "[p]romote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries". In carrying out this power, Congress authorized under 35 U.S.C. §101 a grant of a patent to "[w]hoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition or matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof." Therefore, a fundamental premise is that a patent is a statutorily created vehicle for Congress to confer an exclusive right to the inventors for "inventions" that promote the progress of "science and the useful arts". The phrase "technological arts" has been created and used by the courts to offer another view of the term "useful arts". See In re Musgrave, 167 USPQ (BNA) 280 (CCPA 1970). Hence, the first test of whether an invention is eligible for a patent is to determine if the invention is within the "technological arts".

9. Further, despite the express language of §101, several judicially created exceptions have been established to exclude certain subject matter as being patentable subject matter covered by §101. These exceptions include "laws of nature", "natural phenomena", and "abstract ideas". See Diamond v. Diehr, 450, U.S. 175, 185, 209 USPQ (BNA) 1, 7 (1981). However, courts have found that even if an invention incorporates abstract ideas, such as mathematical algorithms, the invention may nevertheless be statutory subject matter if the invention as a whole produces a "useful, concrete and tangible result." See State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Financial Group, Inc. 149 F.3d 1368, 1973, 47 USPQ2d (BNA) 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1998).

10. This "two prong" test was evident when the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals (CCPA) decided an appeal from the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences (BPAI). See In re Toma, 197 USPQ (BNA) 852 (CCPA 1978). In Toma, the court held that the recited mathematical algorithm did not render the claim as a whole non-statutory using the Freeman-Walter-Abele test as applied to Gottschalk v. Benson, 409 U.S. 63, 175 USPQ (BNA) 673 (1972). Additionally, the court decided separately on the issue of the "technological arts". The court developed a "technological arts" analysis:

The "technological" or "useful" arts inquiry must focus on whether the claimed subject matter...is statutory, not on whether the product of the claimed subject matter...is statutory, not on whether the prior art which the claimed subject matter purports to replace...is statutory, and not on whether the claimed subject matter is presently perceived to be an improvement over the prior art, e.g., whether it "enhances" the operation of a machine. In re Toma at 857.

In Toma, the claimed invention was a computer program for translating a source human language (e.g., Russian) into a target human language (e.g., English). The court found that the claimed computer implemented process was within the "technological art" because the claimed invention was an operation being performed by a computer within a computer.

11. The decision in State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Financial Group, Inc. never addressed this prong of the test. In State Street Bank & Trust Co., the court found that the "mathematical exception" using the Freeman-Walter-Abele test has little, if any, application to determining the presence of statutory subject matter but rather, statutory subject matter should be based on whether the operation produces a "useful, concrete and tangible result". See State Street Bank & Trust Co. at 1374. Furthermore, the court found that there was no "business method exception" since the court decisions that purported to create such exceptions were based on novelty or lack of enablement issues and not on statutory grounds. Therefore, the court held that "[w]hether the patent's claims are too broad to be patentable is not to be judged under §101, but rather under §§102, 103 and 112." See State Street Bank & Trust Co. at 1377. Both of these analysis goes towards whether the claimed invention is non-statutory because of the presence of an abstract idea. Indeed, State Street abolished the Freeman-Walter-Abele test used in Toma. However, State Street never addressed the second part of the analysis, i.e., the "technological arts" test established in Toma because the invention in State Street (i.e., a computerized system for determining the year-end income, expense, and capital gain or loss for the portfolio) was already determined to be within the technological arts under the Toma test. This dichotomy has been recently acknowledged by the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences (BPAI) in affirming a §101 rejection finding the claimed invention to be non-statutory. See Ex parte Bowman, 61 USPQ2d (BNA) 1669 (BdPatApp&Int 2001).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

12. Claims 15-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Tanner (WO 01/59590).

As per Claim 15.

Tanner (590) discloses:

parsing a query to provide at least one city pair corresponding to an origin and a destination, see figure 3;

retrieving fares and fare rules for each city pair over a time period set in the query, see figure 3;

evaluating the retrieved fares against the retrieve rules and returning a status corresponding to pass, fail, or defer see figure 3 (Avl); producing a summary of the results of the rules for a fare against the criteria specified in the query, see figure 7B; and displaying the summary on a user output device, see figures 3, 4A-B.

As per Claim 16.

Tanner (590) further discloses determining whether the summary is complete, likely complete, partially complete or whether the summary is missing information, see figure 3 (Avl).

As per Claim 17.

Tanner (590) further discloses the table is comprised of rows that represent fare rules, see figure 3, (rule button for each row) and columns that represent rule summaries, see rules.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

Art Unit: 3639

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

13. Claim 18 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tanner (WO 01/59590) in view of Kirk (5,768,578).

As per Claim 18.

Tanner (590) further discloses the table where rows represent fares, see figure 3, Adult, Approx. Tax, Total of Tanner and columns that represent rules, see (Rules);

Tanner (590) does not disclose applying a color to cells of the table with the color scheme signifying whether the cell corresponds to pass, fail or defer status.

Kirk ('578) teaches the display of different color, underline or italics in a document with a mixture of text, graphics and hyperlinks, see column 26, lines 47-55 to distinguish the colored portions to attract the user's attention.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made to distinguish areas in a presented page by different color, underlining, or typeface as taught by Kirk ('578) to distinguish text to attract the user's attention.

Prior Art Made of Record

14. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Scipioni (6,336,097) and DeMarcken et al ('521 and 572) disclose use of a combinability table/matrix, but do not disclose display of the table/matrix.
